INTRODUCTION

The Tennessee Central Railway Company Records are a part of the record of the east-west railroad through Tennessee that operated between Hopkinsville, Kentucky, and the Harriman-Emory Gap. Judge William E. Miller of the U.S. District Court, Nashville, Tennessee, donated the collection to the Tennessee State Library and Archives. The records occupy 52.08 linear feet of shelf space and number approximately 2,700 items and 46 volumes.

Single photocopies of unpublished writings in the Tennessee Central Railway Company records may be made for purposes of scholarly research.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The Tennessee Central Railway Company Records, 1884-1968, are a partial record of the east-west railroad that crossed Tennessee from Clarksville to Harriman-Emory Gap, with an addition to Hopkinsville, Kentucky, in the west. The railway provided service to the midsection of the state. The organization and construction of the railway functioned similarly to other railroads during the last half of the nineteenth century: small short lines built first, then combined into the larger company. Lack of adequate finances hampered the company from its beginning, with several receiverships and bankruptcies occurring. The company ceased operations on August 31, 1968. A court-appointed trustee divided and sold the property to three competing railroads: the Illinois Central, the Louisville and Nashville, and the Southern Railway System.

The collection consists of bills, claims, clippings, correspondence, court records, estimates, exhibits, financial documents, inventories, land records, legal documents, lists, maps, passes, printed materials, reports, schedules and studies. The majority of the collection are contracts, ranging from the leasing of small tracts for fishing camps and gardens on railroad-owned land to multi-million dollar purchases of equipment.

Also of interest is the information pertaining to the sale of the Tennessee Central beltline around southwestern Nashville for the Interstate 440 highway and details of loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

An almost complete set of annual reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission from 1905 to 1968 provides interesting information as to types and amount of freight hauled, equipment, and finances.

Following is a list of the companies found in this collection:

Cumberland Plateau Railroad Company. Chartered January 22, 1901. Branch of Tennessee Central from Campbell Junction to Isoline. Started by Campbell Coal & Coke Company. Sold at foreclosure summer of 1902 to Tennessee Central Railway Company. In Cumberland County, from Big Apple or Johnson's Stand, to Jamestown (Fentress County).

Kingston Bridge and Terminal Railway. Chartered September 23, 1899. Constructed a bridge.

Nashville & Clarksville Railroad. Chartered April 16, 1901 (organized March 1, 1901). Built line from Nashville via Clarksville to Kentucky State line northwest of Clarksville. Later, extended to Hopkinsville, Kentucky. Changed name to Tennessee Central Railroad Company, April 30, 1902.

Nashville & Knoxville Railroad Company. Organized March 1884. Built a track of railroad from Lebanon to Monterey with a branch from Carthage Junction to a point on Cumberland River opposite Carthage and a branch from Monterey to Crawford (deed 1889).

Nashville Terminal Company. Built depot and yards at Nashville, leased for 99 years on May 1, 1902, to Tennessee Central Railway Company.

Tennessee Central Company. Built and operated railroad line from Nashville to Lebanon.

Tennessee Central Railroad Company (1909-1922). Sold under foreclosure January 10, 1922, to Tennessee Central Railway Company.

Tennessee Central Railway. Organized June 1897. Railroad from Monterey to South Harriman, with short spurs or branches.

Tennessee Central Railway Company. Filed for reorganization December 14, 1967, suspended operations August 31, 1968, and closed August 31, 1969.

Tennessee Central Station Company. Built and leased stations to Tennessee Central Railway Company (Minutes 1927-1930).

Tennessee Construction Company. General contractor for building of Tennessee Central Railway Company. Officers served as directors of railway. Sublet contract to Naugle, Holcomb, and Company, which in turn hired local resident contractors to handle actual construction. (1898)

Tennessee Improvement Company. Contracted to build east end of Tennessee Central Railway Company (ca. 1900).
